

Max: I personally think I did a pretty good job or at least made a good attempt at making things work and look close to the prototype. I do think I could've done a better job at maybe researching things that I did not know a lot about. Like with responsiveness, I did not know much of how to do it and trying to research it to figure it out did not work out which led me to asking my teammates. I did some problem solving every now and then with some of the coding with images and columns which I am proud that I was able to figure out. Or with the reversed card on the home page which had an image on the bottom and text on top which made life easier instead of trying to figure out how to have text on top and an image directly below it without having to make multiple rows.
